NOTES

Rec Play: uses the paddle system (described below), booked thru Court Reserve; limited to sign-up of 6 people/court (e.g. 24 people if 4 courts are allocated), people come and go as they please, they don't have to stay the entire time

Drop-in: uses the paddle system (described below); not booked thru Court Reserve; no limit to the number of players people come and go as they please, they don't have to stay the entire time

EVENING PLAY

There is some overlap in organized play between daytime (8:30 am-6:30 pm) and evening (6:30-9 pm). The intention is that daytime players would primarily be retired individuals or people who are not working or going to school. Evening players would primarily be students, people who work during the day, or families. People who play in a specific daytime program will be encouraged to not sign up for the same program offered in the evening.

COHORT PLAY

A member books a court instead of booking an individual spot. That member then plays with their chosen group (1-4 players). Cohort play can be used for doubles games, singles games, or drilling. Only members can participate in cohort play

PADDLE SYSTEM

NEXT UP - The first four paddles from the left are the next group up to play. This group should prepare to enter the court as soon as it becomes available.

FOURSOME GROUP - If you wish to stay together as a foursome, place your paddles in sideways. This indicates that you intend to play as a group and should be treated as a single unit in the rotation.

ROTATION - Once a game is finished, the current players should exit the court promptly, allowing the next four players (or the designated foursome) to enter.
